NEW SITE FOR PLAYGROUND. Civic Improvement League Leases

Part of Soulard Market.

Through a city ordinance the Civic Improvement League has leased 200 feet of ground on the Soulard Market lot in Ninth street, between Julia and Carroli.

The lease will extend over a period of five years and the Civic Improvement League intends to make it a model playstound, one of a more permanent nature than those constructed last year.

The lot is an ideal site for a playground, for there are thousands of children in the vicinity, who have had no place to amuse themselves during the warm months of the summer.

Plans for the playsrounds and a bath-house will be made within a few days, and work on the improvement will begin in-mediately thereafter.

County Has no More Power to Rus Highways Across Track Than Through Private Yard.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Macon, Mo., April 5 .- Judge Shelton granted a temporary injunction yesterday against J. W. Hicks, road overseer, to restrain him from tearing down the fences of the Keokuk and Northwestern Railroad's right of way, near Downing, Schuyler County. way, near Downing, Schuyler County.

Hicks and his men were building a new country road in accordance with the order of the County Court of Schuyler County. The new highway crossed the railroad track and the railroad company was coolly notified to remove its fences and fix up cattle Tuards, etc. There had been no attempt of the County Court to come to terms with the railroad, nor condemnation proceedings filed. The railroad was simply notlified to get ready for the highway and that if it did not, the highway would come along anyhow and its fences would be torn down.

Judge Shelton didn't hesitate long about Judge Shelton didn't hrestate long about stranting the injunction.
"A railroad has rights the same as an individual," he said. "It had to condemn and purchase the property that it uses, and the County Court has to deal with it just the same as the railroad has to deal with farmers when it wants to cross their property. You have no more right to run a country highway across a railroad track without the railroad's permission than you have to run one through a man's back yard."

LOSS OF TRADE IS PREDICTED.

Consular Reports Say That if Project Is Carried Through United States Will Capture Bulk of Trade in Some Republics.

SPECTAL BY CABLE TO THE NEW YORK HERALD AND THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC. Berlin, April 5.—(Copyright, 1903—The Consular reports from German reports and special agents in South America to the foreign office describing the new Hispano-American Chamber of Commerce, and the proposed Pan-American railway, connecting North and South America, cause acute alarm in official as well as commercial

The Post to-day sends out a warning note and states that Germany's hold on South America is seriously imperilled by the efforts of Pan-Americans to conclude at least close trade alliance.

The Berliner Tageblatt, in reveiwing the objects of the Hispano-American Chamber of Commerce, concludes with the significant statement: "In the interest of our export and of our capital invested in South America, it behooves Germany to keep an eye on this our capital invested in South America, it behooves Germany to keep an eye on this movement."

Consular reports received at the Foreign office describes the situation as exceedingly unfavorable to Germany. The prejudice and feeling aroused throughout the countries of South America, where Germans have settled and transact a large bulk of its export and import trade, owing to the Venezuelan action, are said to favor this Pan-American trade alliance.

To make matters still worse, there comed a statement that French capitalists are making overtures to President Castro and hope to displace Germany as the chief creditor of Venezuela.

The head of a large exporting house, which maintains its own agents in South America, especially in Venezuela, Bolivia, Chile, Honduras and Uruguay, said:

"There is no doubt Germany faces a crists in its trading with South America. If the proposed railway affording directing communication between New York and Buenos Ayres is successfully projected, it will leave Germany helpless, despite the regular steamship connection.

"It must be remembered that Germany is new contending not only against competition, but also against racial prejudices and suspicions inspired among the fatives, some to drive them out of business and monopolize all the sources of wealth.

"This is only natural; but another fact is that the South American Republics, so our agents report, have of late become more reconciled than formerly to an alliance with the United States and the sims of the Pan-American Congress."

Thomas Mosher a night watchman on the steamer City of Chester, has asked the police to investigate what he thinks was the drowning of a roustabout named Robert Spain, 59 years old.

About 2 o'clock Saturday morning Mosher says he heard a splash in the river near the boat which sounded as if a person had fallen or jumped overboard. He found no one missing at the time, but Saturday night at pay time Spain did not appear for his wages, and for this reason he believes the man was drowned.

GOMPERS'S CHEERFUL VIEW OF THE LABOR SITUATION.

He Says Conditions for the Laboring Man Are Better Now Than Ever Before, and There Is a Hope of Further Improvement - He Believes the Success of Labor Lies in Organization, and Warmly Commends Arbitration for Settlement of Disputes Between Employers and Employes.

Washington, April 5.-Samuel Gompers. president of the American Federation of Labor and the virtual head of nearly 2,000,-000 organized workingmen, sees in the present industrial situation a better condition for the laboring man than ever before in history, and, in the future, hope of still further improvement.

CAREPULLY FILLED.

In an interview given to The Republic to-day he expressed in unqualified terms his sincerest pleasure at what organized labor

They will occur so long as the capital class refuses to recognize the dignity and rights of labor.

"This I can say however. Strikes are becoming fewer and fewer each year, and there is knowed for hope that in the foture, however distant, differences between labor and capital may be settled without recourse to such means."

This tone of hope pervaded the entire statement which Mr. Gompers made. He attributed the present situation entirely to the efforts of organized labor, and insisted that all that has been gained in the way of arbitration of labor disputes was due to the union and organization of the various working classes throughout the country. His first statement expressed the sincerest satisfaction that the beginning of April, the usual time of labor's unrest throughout the world, found a better situation than ever before existed in this country. As to the merits of the iew disputes and strikes now in force Mr. Gompers said he did not wish to make any comment. Time, he said, would adjust the differences and arbitration, he hoped, would prevent any prolonged struggles.

"The last year," continued Mr. Gompers, "has developed a spirit of conciliation on both sides that cannot fail to be satisfactory to the people of this country. Progress has been made, and remarkable progress. It is safe to say that the adjustment of industrial differences by arbitration has advanced during the last year more than any other in the history of organized labor. This, I may say without fear of contradiction, is a direct result of the remarkable growth of organized labor.

port is accepted by all of the people of this country, "Arbitration is gaining not only every year, but every day, and this spring we find the condition of the laboring man better than ever before in all history. Strikes, however, will occur so long as capitalists refuse to recognize the inherent rights of the working people and fall to assist them in their efforts for constant improvement, material moral and social."

"To whom do you give the credit for this advancement of labors interests?" was asked.

sincerest pleasure at what organized labor has accomplished and what it reasonably expects to accomplish in the future. He emphasized the growth of the spirit of conciliation on the side of both labor and capital, and in reviewing the results of the last year, mentioned the appointment and report of the Authracite Coal-Strike Commission as the most important contributor to the peaceful settlement of labor disputes that has been known in many years. "Do you agree with Senator Hanna," was asked, "that the end of the strike era is at hand?"

DOES NOT AGREE WITH HANNA. "I cannot go so far as that. From my standpoint I do not yet see the end of strikes. That depends too much ou capital. They will occur so long as the capital class refuses to recognize the dignity and rights of labor.

"This I can say, however. Strikes are becoming fewer and fewer each year, and the single string in the matter of arbitration of the savent of the sav

"To answer you frankly, I must say that this spirit of arbitration on the part of the employers has been forced by labor. It has not been spontaneous on the part of capitalists. The laboring man has compelled each year, and more in the past year than any other, an appreciation on the part of the capitalist of his rights. It has been necessary in many cases to appeal first to that great third party, the public and through the public, and public spirit unyielding, capital has often changed its position.

HOPE LIES IN ORGANIZATION. "The working people now realize more clearly than ever before that their only hope lies in organization, and that in complete union they can better protect their present condition and strive with success for improvement in the future. Their constant endeavor should be to maintain what they have and strive for still further improvement.

they have and strive for still further improvement.

"The amelioration of the condition of the working class makes for a better national life and all that the term implies. Our one strife is to induce the employer of labor to recognize this fact. The concillatory spirit should be thrown on the one side as well as on the other, and I think to-day that labor sees more clearly than ever that it should strive to attain its high purposes by peaceful means, and peaceful means only. I hope that this growing spirit of conciliation has come to stay, for I think it tends toward the improvement of all classes.

"Labor has gained by it in the past and it has much to gain by it in the future. Neither side in any great industrial dispute should have any fear of arbitration by just men."
